Mr. Glass named the following as some of the bills passed: The child labor question in the District of Columbia; the employers liability bill; a bill prohibiting railroads from forcing their men to work over staten hours a day; bill for standard equipment in factories and safety devices, and several eighthours law bills.

Mr. Glass concluded his remarks by paying a very high tribute to the Farmers Union, and stated that it was mainly through its co-operation that the parcel post bill was passed.

The final address of the morning session was made by Andrew J. Furuseth, president of the Seamen's International Union. Mr. Furuseth spoke for about twenty minutes on conditions under which sailors were being employed, and then offered resolutions, which were adopted.

FIRE BURNS HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING

Daring Work of Seamen From Fleet Prevents Serious Conflagration in Newport News.

Newport News. Va., June 3.—Fire, believed to have been started by small boys smoking elgarettes on the first floor of the building, completely destroyed the high school building, a four-story brick structure in the heart of the city, to-night, entailing a loss of approximately $40,000. The uames had gained great headway before being discovered, and only the daring and spectacular work of a score of sailors from the Atlantic battleship fleet prevented a serious conflagration.

The jack tars fought the blaze with a reskless abandon that brought applause from the thousands of spectators that viewed the blaze. Seven of the sailors were injured or burned, and two firemen were overcome by smoke. Only one of the sailors. Max Perry, of the batteship Rhode Island, was seriously hurt. He fell from a ladder in a second-story window and had his right shoulder fractured. He is in a hospital. All of the high school records were completely destroyed, with them being the examination papers of the pupils who had been examined this week. The pupols will be taken care of in the other school buildings.

She was not able to rest at night on account of the coughing spells. Her stomach became so bad that she could scarcely eat anything at all, and caused her great misery. Her kidneys and bladder caused her untold suffering, and she had pains in the back, bowels, sides and chest, and her rheumatism troubled her very much. She had pains and soreness in the arms and limbs, and was in such a weak, rundown condition that she could scarcely get from them, and he advised me at least to give them a trial. I told him that I was not able to call upon Gray as I was weak, and could scarcely get out of the house. He said he would bring a bottle of the Quaker Herb Extract to me if I would give it a trial. This I consented to do, and am now thankful that I did. After taking one bottle I was able to walk from my home to the drug store to tell Gray what the Quaker Herb Extract is doing for me.
